Attendees: Please see the Sign-in Sheets

Objective:

To discuss New College's Master Plan and collaborate with students, faculty, and staff on ideas and suggestions for the Campus Master Plan (CMP).

Meeting Minutes:

David Rancourt, Vice President of Enrollment Management and Student Services, opened the meeting and discussed the importance of a master plan and how it is required for all state universities. The importance of this meeting is for our NCF community and the public to provide constructive ideas as the update to the Campus Master Plan is in development.

Richard Corcoran, President of New College, provided information about the master planning process and how feedback can be provided. He shared how the last Master Plan was completed in 2016. He also shared the three main focuses on campus including the student experience, transforming the east side of campus, and adding a world-class sports facilities. He recognized the individuals responsible for working on this project, naming Glenn Darling at Hall Darling Architects, Chris Reed from Stoss, Designlab, Marty Hylton, Architecture Sarasota, and Sweet Sparkman. He thanked everyone involved and turned over the meeting to Glenn Darling of Hall Darling Architects.

Hall Darling provided a high-level overview of the master planning, process, and timeline.

*Please see the presentation for a detailed explanation of the East Campus Master Planning.

David Rancourt explained the table exercise and directed everyone to collaborate on ideas within their table and to choose a leader to present their ideas to the room. Following the table exercise, each table reported on ideas they have for the campus. *Please see feedback board for items.

David Rancourt thanked everyone for their detailed suggestions, as well as for sharing the importance of community collaboration and working together as a team.

Notes:

There were three questions asked for this project.

1. What do you like best about New College?
2. If you could change one thing physically about New College what would it be?
3. What would you like to see for the campus in the future?

All suggestions for the Master Planning can be seen on the scanned note cards and on the whiteboard (see photo).
